Severe Weather Outlook Sunday, February 21, 2021

Hazardous Weather

A cold front will continue pushing through the Central and East Texas during the evening hours. A few light showers are possible along and ahead of the cold front across the far east and southeast counties. Brisk northwest winds 15 to 20 mph and gusty will occur immediately behind the cold frontal passage with colder temperatures. Winds will diminish to between 10 to 15 mph by sunrise Monday morning. "Feel like" temperatures to start Monday will be in the 20s.

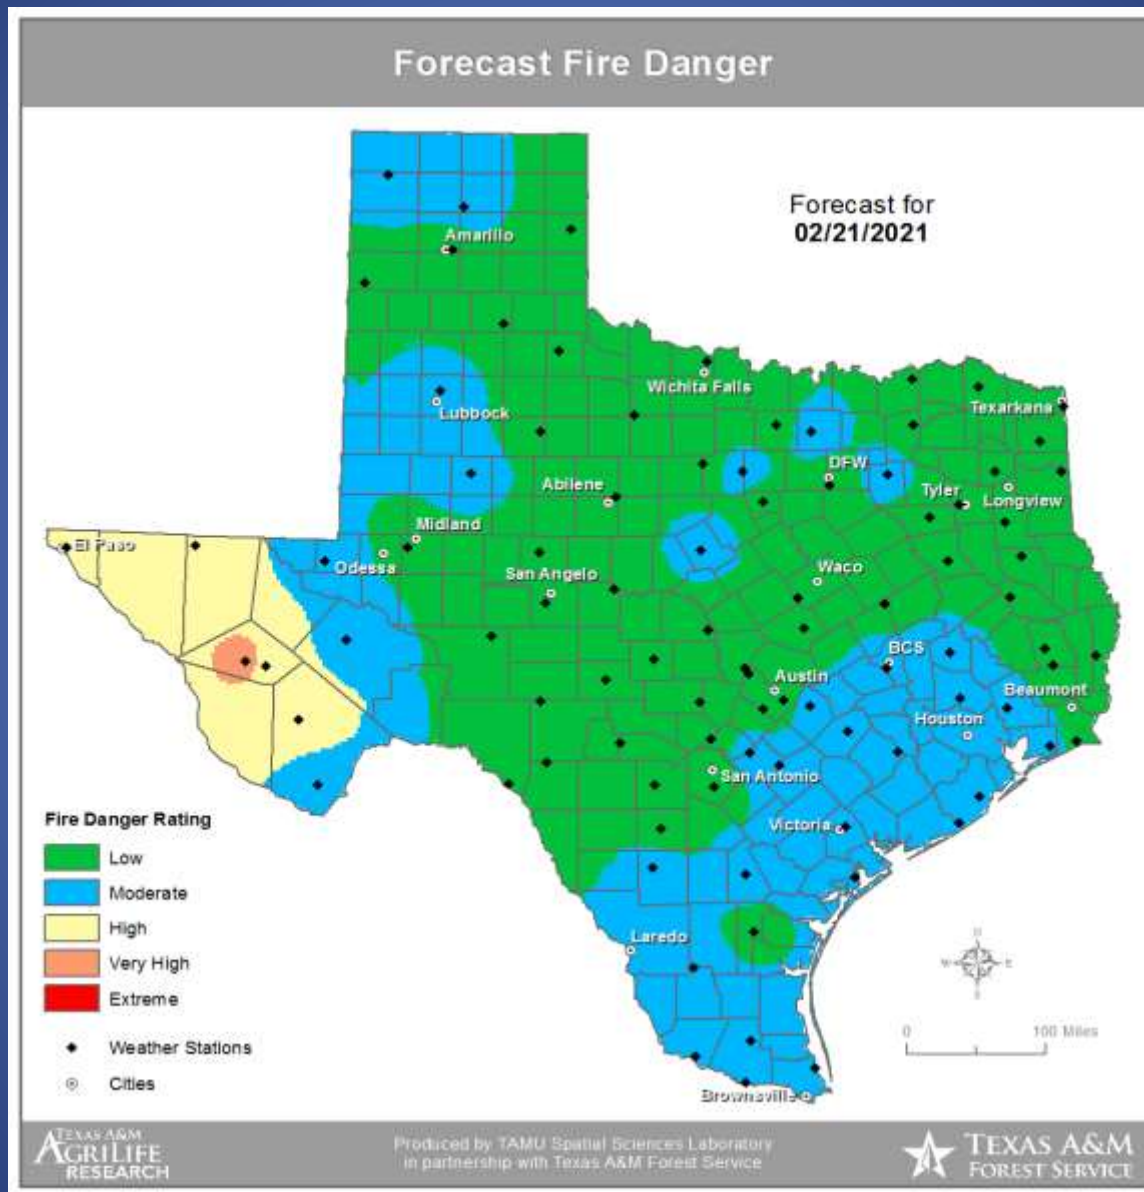

Breezy conditions are expected Sunday in the wake of a cold front. Gusts out of the north-northwest at 20 to 45 mph are expected, with gusts toward the higher end of this range expected across the Oklahoma and northern Texas Panhandles and toward the lower end in the far southwestern Texas Panhandle. Winds will peak during the mid to late morning hours and then decrease through the afternoon.
